Online Career Resources

http://www.careeronestop.org/ Career One Stop provides a variety of career exploration tools and resources. This site includes an option to browse careers, information on average salary rates and required education/training, tips for writing resumes and cover letters, and a variety of other helpful suggestions and resources.

http://www.careerinfonet.org/skills/default.aspx Skills profiler is one of the features offered through the Career One Stop website. It helps someone find the skills necessary for a specific job, or allows the person to rate his/her skills and search for job types matching his/her current skill set.

http://www.careerinfonet.org/MOC/ Another feature offered by Career One Stop is the Military to Civilian Occupation Translator. It helps people begin to explore career options by matching his/her military skills to civilian occupations.

http://bls.gov/oco/ The Occupational Outlook Handbook is put out each year by the Department of Labor and provides information on the training/education needed, earnings, expected job prospects, work tasks, and working conditions of hundreds of different jobs.

http://bls.gov/oco/cgi/ The Career Guide to Industries is similar to the Occupational Outlook Handbook but focuses on industries (e.g. healthcare, education, etc.) rather than specific jobs.

http://online.onetcenter.org/ O*Net OnLine is another career exploration website. It allows you to generally browse various jobs and occupations as well as search more specifically by abilities, skills, work activities, interests, and work values.

http://www.quintcareers.com/ Quintessential Careers provides a wealth of information on career, college, and job search advice. This website has more information/tips on job searching and networking than some of the other sites. Additionally, there are a lot of resources and articles listed to assist in pursuing further education and choosing a college.
