Source Paragraph
(from the article “Personality Plus,” by Malcolm Gladwell, New Yorker, Sept 20, 2004).
One of the most popular personality tests in the world is the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI), a psychological-assessment system based on Carl Jung’s notion that people make sense of the world through a series or psychological frames. Some people are extraverts, some are introverts. Some process information through logical thought. Some are directed by their feelings. Some make sense of the world through intuitive leaps. Others collect data through their senses.

Student Paragraph 1
The Myers-Briggs Test is a very popular way to assess someone’s personality type. Philosopher Carl Jung believed that people make sense of the world in different ways. Some are extraverts and some are introverts. According to this idea, people process information either by logical reasoning or through intuition or feelings.

The “upcoming” link on the lower left leads to a calendar area. This calendar has three tabs: work to do, events, and all.

- Work To Do: The links here will be activities (discussions, assignments, quizzes) that you need to complete.
- Events: These will be additional event added to the calendar (perhaps linked to content items)
- All: This pulls the list of all calendar items.

Make sure to check both the “work to do” and the “events”. It is suggested to use the “all” viewpoint to make sure that you do not miss anything!
The “notifications” link on the bottom right shows notifications for upcoming content, assignments, and announcements. The “update” tab provides those links. Click on them to open the content in the app. The “subscriptions” tab shows discussions that you have subscribed to (or posted in already).
